

Our president was elected to office in part because of his belief in a market economy, unencumbered by government regulation. In fact, he has attempted to have federal employees compete for the 'business' they currently have. Does it make sense then to limit competition in the broadcast business? If the broadcasters want to eliminate satellite radio service, all they have to do is be better. Right now, there is little difference between stations in the same format. If I thought the locals could do better, I wouldn't be paying $10/month.

Reject this power grab, and force the members of NAB to beat satellite by being better than satellite.
